DEO

29:32

A reimagining of Deo Gratias (ca. 1497) by Johannes Ockeghem.

Composed by Pauline Kim Harris and Spencer Topel

These pieces are best heard continuously, but for ease of navigation track divisions have been added.

In reimagining the Bach Chaconne and Ockeghem's Deo Gratias, I searched for meaning and connection to the greater, mysterious universe. My collaborator Spencer Topel, and I created an expansive sonic experience. It is as close to stopping time as I can imagine. —PK

Little did I know that what I recorded two days before Christmas of 2014 was what would become the source of my debut solo album, Heroine. In the process of making this album, it feels as if a lifetime has passed. Much has happened, not to mention how destabilized the world we live in has become—chaos, distrust and brokenness. We have lost many loved ones. Not all related to the state of the world, but due to other very real and personal battles such as depression, addiction and mental illness. Yet, so many continue to hang on in a constant state of pain.

I began to think about what it must feel like: the unimaginable task of caring for loved ones going through and living in this state. There are people—angels—though, that make the sacrifice of dedicating their lives to caring for them, keeping our loved ones around if even for one more day.

—Pauline Kim

I walk away and take the back road

I see a path going uphill

It leads me to a place unfamiliar

There is a mountain lion

I stop

Then, I see another...and another

I realize I am surrounded

Calmly lounging

They watch me

I feel fear

Should I drop and roll?

Curl up into a ball?

Run?

[I wake up]

AMBIENT CHACONNE

For violin and electronics

By Pauline Kim Harris
and Spencer Topel

Ambient Chaconne is an immersive exploration of the J. S. Bach Partita No. 2 in D Minor: IV. Chaconne (BWV 1004). Unfolding over 42 minutes Ambient Chaconne blends live and pre-recorded violin with electronics. Using both human and machine transcription, the Chaconne serves as the structural underpinning to the work, appearing often as small disassociated fragments, and at other times in extremes: consisting of extended passages of sounded or silent materials. As with renditions of the Chaconne by past composers such as Brahms and Busoni, Ambient Chaconne extends the notion of transcription metaphysical, framing the Chaconne both as a musical composition and as a collective-subconscious memory.

DEO

For violin and electronics

By Pauline Kim Harris
and Spencer Topel

Deo is an acoustic-electronic transcription of Johannes Ockeghem's stunning Deo Gratias devised as a complement to Ambient Chaconne. Notable as a 36-part canon, Ockeghem Ockeghem evokes singing of angels in heaven via an innovation on a traditional canon, using this ancient musical device as a kind of acoustic feedback delay. In essence, our Deo expands this idea of delays to a canon of thousands, in an ever expanding and infinite soundscape, where the melodies eventually dissolve into resonance.

*I close my eyes and there I see you
So beautiful Smiling, full of life*

Talented, generous and funny always ready to make me laugh

This is how I remember you and miss you

*That which has taken you so far and deep away
splinters my heart consumes me with pain and sadness no words can describe*

You are not lost but so so loved

*This world disappoints
and can be cruel*

Give it a chance time to make it up to you

You are as you have always been and forever be

LOVE
